

“You, Me, and Them”
Data for Q1 and Q2

(Asked of all respondents)

Q1. Generally speaking, do you believe there is or is not discrimination against (Respondent's own group identity) in America today?

Table X:
Percent of Each Group Saying That Discrimination
Against Their Own Group Exists in America Today

Group	Percent of each group saying discrimination against their own group exists in America today
African Americans	92%
Latinos	78%
Native Americans	75%
Asian Americans	61%
Whites (Non-Hispanic)	55%
LGBTQ	90%

Example interpretation: “Overall, 78% of Latinos say that discrimination against Latinos exists in America today.”

(Asked only of those who said that they believe discrimination against their own group exists)

Q2. When it comes to discrimination against (Respondent's own group identity) in America today, which do you think is the bigger problem?

Table Y:
Each Group’s Perceptions of Whether Individual or Institutional Discrimination is the Larger Problem for Discrimination Against Their Group

Group	Among those who believe discrimination against their own group exists, percent of each group saying _____ is the bigger problem...
	Discrimination based in the prejudice of individual people	Both equally (vol)	Discrimination based on laws and government policies
African Americans	49%	25%	25%
Latinos	47%	14%	37%
Native Americans	41%	16%	39%
Asian Americans	68%	16%	14%
Whites (Non-Hispanic)	61%	11%	26%
LGBTQ	43%	23%	33%

Example interpretation: “Among Latinos who believe discrimination against Latinos exists in America today, 47% say the larger problem is discrimination based in the prejudice of individual people. Thirty-seven percent of Latinos who believe anti-Latino discrimination exists say that discriminated based on laws and government policies in the larger problem, and 14% say both equally are a problem.”
